The spiritual movements of life-energy, however, were first exemplified scientifically by Wilhelm Reich (1953) who also argued that primitive peoples were generally more in touch with life-energy processes in nature. Later, several cultures lost this visual capacity, lost contact with life-energy, and began to mystify natural forces into various metaphysical abstractions, high gods, etc. These same ascetic peoples, it is argued here, were very anti-child, anti-sexual, and violent, arising firstly within Sumeria. This generalized pattern in ancient pottery and artwork motifs was first discussed and described by the Swiss scholar Hans Peter Seiden (1972), who argued that early matristic ... p 296 all trace of the mother-goddess cult disappeared - leaving in its place. The recklessness of such changes and their absolute chronological megalissism^{E-I} while evidence of climate change is present, such changes are also strongly linked to human actions. p.318 Such pulsations in climate, hydrological adjustments, and transformations of the landscape appear well documented, as are the outbreaks of militant nomads themselves. Factors such as politics, population growth, and economics have also played a role in these events, but such factors are not static - Indeed, they tend naturally to interact dynamically with each other, but are stimulated in the first instance by climate changes. Once triggered into movement, these processes overlapped in a continuing series of events which shaped the history of the region. The important point for this study is that various significant events, social chaos, migrations and invasions, transpired nearly simultaneously to a major shift in climate and environment. p.319 sand materials, less than 1%, abundant salts such as carbonates, sulfates, and sodium chloride are found either in the soils, or as surface deposits. Extensive rules for lovemaking were formulated p.357 Buddhist priests were forbidden from sexual indulgence, and could be killed if they went into a house where a woman lived alone & when found guilty, such priests were targeted for the severest tortures of tortures, involving skin flogging and rotten lead - under these anti-female and anti-heterosexual conditions, homosexuality flourished - p.360 Hunting maintained a lavish and cruel style, mixed with confucian puritanism^{E-I} p.360 The war against public tenderness and love heats up^{E-I} p.363 (cf PK 86) stealing a sweet kiss "comfort girl"^{E-I} p.363 fully blown nomadism p.364 desecration occurred before the development of a patriarchal authoritarian, warlike nomadism, and was a central mechanism in stimulating such changes in these areas. However ... invaded shortly before the onset of said tradition p.365 after they were annihilated and replaced by new inhabitants. More importantly for this study, the beliefs, behaviors, social structures and institutions of the patriarchal authoritarian norms were transplanted into the newly conquered regions, irrespective of climate^{E-I}; p.366 or other key aspects of the Saharan cultural complex anywhere^{E-I} confirm the post presence of a ubiquitously higher status for women, greater autonomy for children and adolescents. E-I The temporal and spatial geographic patterns of the Saharan cultural complex^{E-I} fully confirm the overall Saharan survey, of human armoring, resistance and social violence being the product of biological reactions to severe and prolonged drought, famine, starvation conditions, rather than stretching genetic and innate in the human species. p.369

If the general theory on the origins of enhanced patriarchy in the process of desertification is truly a global theory^{E-I} Ideally, systematic reconstruction of historical and prehistoric events^{E-I} would have to be done for these areas^{E-I} and the attribut^{E-I} patriarchy itself gradually diluted and eventually disappeared^{E-I} were clearly on the right track, but they lacked adequate data by which to test their theories^{p.320} only the poor maps of the early diffusionist ethnographers exist, which understandably have not been widely accepted. Even my own maps presented here, which are among the most detailed to be produced since 1930s, can only be considered as first approximation. ^{E-I} Locus^{E-I} the high degree of correlation between rainfall and longitude, and diversity indicates that the Australasian 1953 p.371-2^{E-I} It is recalled that, felt such patriarchal attitudes had invaded their culture^{E-I} p.372 these feelings of the traditional natives about ~~temper~~ directions toward which happiness or evil were to be found appeared to be rooted in real historical events, namely the locations furthest removed from where many diseases first appeared^{E-I} The horizon^{E-I} is not well known (history of the -^{E-I} aborigines^{E-I} and other social characteristics averaged situation, resulting from the existence of many different bands monogenetic^{E-I} systematically generated on geographically identified^{p.375} anti-child, anti-female, and anti-sexual attitudes and behaviors cannot derive from biological instinct alone, but are rooted in social or environmental phenomenon, passed from one generation to the next.  the prison population in the USA; the western adoption to the new narcotics, particularly imported from Southeast Asia. This latter phenomenon currently has the Western democracies trapped in a deadly self-Victimism with different subversive extreme-patriotist fraternalships, who control the spigot. And it must be pointed out how advocates of both liberal and conservative politics have preferentially supported many of these pathologies even while rejecting others. But this discussion must wait for another time, to do the topic The justice it deserves xxx. The point of interest for this paper and my thesis discovery, are the locations and chronology of the various archaeological sites (names). p. 437 obvious the Christianity related to environmental pressures
